A moose hunt in Swedish Lapland, less than 100 km from the Arctic Circle, is a real challenge and a test of the hunter's physical condition in Nordic conditions. It is hunted in the classic Scandinavian way with dogs, where the moose is first tracked and tracked with the help of dogs. The terrain is challenging, typical of northern Scandinavia, wetlands and bogs with birch and pine forests and areas of open heath. One hunting group has 2 maximum 4 hunters. The arrival is at the northern Kiruna Airport and from there it takes about 3 hours to the place of accommodation, where you can choose accommodation in a hotel guesthouse or a hunting lodge. Both options provide a high standard and quality service with a tasting of elk meat specialties. Hunting guests also have a sauna at their disposal. The most ideal date for moose hunting is until 15.10., after this date the temperatures can start to drop sharply below -20 °C.
